The creative potential of the arts
—One of the first triennales held amid our “new normal”

We would like to express our sincere gratitude to all of the citizens, companies and organizations who have made it possible to hold Yokohama Triennale 2020 “Afterglow.”

Yokohama Triennale 2020 will be held as the world seeks a “new normal” in coexistence with the coronavirus. As we commence one of the first biennale and triennales in the world to open amid these circumstances, I am convinced we can deliver cheer to everyone. We also hope we are able to send a message of courage to artists around the world. Numerous countermeasures have been taken to prevent the spread of the virus at our venues, so visitors will be able to enjoy the works safely and with peace of mind.

This year’s Yokohama Triennale welcomes the Indian artist group Raqs Media Collective as artistic director. Through the lens of the world’s most cutting-edge art, we will examine the relationship between the world and Japan, and society and individuals from various perspectives, and deliver a triennale full of new discoveries and excitement. In addition, with the collaboration of creative hubs such as BankART Life VI and Koganecho Bazaar 2020, the triennale will provide an opportunity to enjoy the city of Yokohama itself. We will also promote inclusion and the education of the next generation so that all people, including the children who will lead the future, can interact with various forms of art and deepen mutual understanding and exchange.

With its “Creative city Yokohama” project, Yokohama is progressing with urban development based on its belief in the creative power of culture and art. We are currently conducting studies for the establishment of a new performing arts facility.

As we face the unprecedented situation of having to coexist with the new coronavirus, we need culture and art in our lives more than ever. Through Yokohama 2020, we will deliver the potential of art to the world from here in Yokohama.

We greatly appreciate your continued understanding and support for the Yokohama Triennale, a national project.

Contemporary Art
—Bringing Together People, Society, and the Moment

It is with much pleasure that we present Yokohama Triennale 2020 “Afterglow,” one of the first global biennales and triennales to open in the current climate.

The coronavirus pandemic has necessitated several unprecedented measures for the triennale, including the postponement of the opening, and I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to the many people whose support was essential in making this event a reality.

In the face of significant restrictions on international travel, it was the collective enthusiasm of the artistic director Raqs Media Collective and participating artists that has delivered to Yokohama these cutting-edge artworks which will now be presented to the world.

In the twenty years since the first Yokohama Triennale was held in 2001, the world has faced changes and difficulties that it never imagined: globalization, environmental problems, conflicts and divisions. During this same time, the triennale has continued, through its focus on contemporary art, to believe in the power and potential of culture, to connect people with society and the moment, and to create opportunities for encounters and connections here in Yokohama. The event has matured into an international exhibition that boasts a history, the attention of the world, and high expectations from the nation of Japan as a national project.

It is our hope that this year’s triennale, held under these various constraints, will provide an opportunity to think about how art might respond to the challenges to our civilization that the new coronavirus has presented.

We wish that Yokohama Triennale 2020 will, as in years past, attract many visitors, stimulate them intellectually and culturally, and serve as a guide to nurture in them the wisdom to thrive in the future.

KONDO Seiichi
Chairperson, Organizing Committee for Yokohama Triennale
Towards Yokohama Triennale 2020

In 2020 the world has confronted an unprecedented challenge in the spread of the new coronavirus. In the art sphere, we have long believed that there is fundamental value in visiting exhibitions in person, witnessing artworks with our own eyes and also sharing those experiences and joys with others. This year we have faced a significant challenge as these premises have been undermined.

It is under these circumstances that we present Yokohama Triennale 2020 “Afterglow,” the seventh edition of this event and one of the first of the world’s biennales and triennales to open in the current climate. It is filled with ideas that today more than ever we must come together to consider.

Artistic Director Raqs Media Collective highlighted several important terms that served as keys in their curatorial process:

Autodidact — The self-taught person
Luminosity — Projecting the light gained from learning to distant places
Friendship — Nurturing friendship in the light
Care — Caring for one another
Toxicity — Coexisting with the poison that exists in the world whether we like it or not

Reflecting on their meanings, it is almost like these five terms foretold our experience of living with the pandemic. In particular, the notion of coexistence with “toxicity” is instructive as we attempt to go about our lives in the post-coronavirus world.

More than 60 artists and groups from over 30 countries and regions will participate in the triennale. This relatively young group of creators, half of whom are in their 20s or 30s, has overcome bans and restrictions on travel and freight in order to present their works. Indeed, having been unable to invite any of our international artists or our Artistic Director to Japan, and instead having to communicate with them through online meetings, we are now approaching the opening of a triennale that has presented challenges unlike any other.

For our visitors, we hope the result will be a richly experiential venue to encounter artworks firsthand and perhaps even gain a sense of a new world that may await.

The milieus that emerge with a Triennale are an invitation to a migration of concerns, hibernating or urgent, from distinct and diverse locations. They then stand re-aligned and re-drawn, suspended in co-presence. We commenced our own crossing, leading to this edition of the Yokohama Triennale, about two years ago, with questions about care, about care with toxicity, about care and friendship, about luminosity within friendship, and about cosmologies of luminance. We shared these sources, not only with the artists but also the world in Episōdo 00.

Meanwhile, in the course of a few months, a tiny virus, an un-living being, emerged, upending assumptions and assigning a task to the entire species. For the first time in human history we, all the billions from all parts of the world, have to undertake — in awareness of each other — the re-making of forms of life. It has brought to the foreground the necessity of re-apprehending the world.

We are now in the afterglow of an unfamiliar, viral, and partly unreadable time, and are without familiar protocols. Alone, and collectively, we have to navigate the oscillation of scales, quickened by the alteration in familiar rules. We are now immersed in a turbulent flow whose pressure rides through us all.

The Afterglow is also a site: it is this exhibition where you walk through deliberations with artists, activating an auto-didactic impulse for the sensing and making of the spectrum that arches from our inner to our cosmic worlds. Autodidacts learn and un-learn everything. If necessary, they need to become misfits in relation to all that is given and taken for granted, because when all the functions and instructions that are written into the manual for fixing a world can’t be fixed, they must be altered.

The Afterglow is also an infrastructure of relationships, of precepts and affects, of an ability to see and narrate the world with patience and wonderment. This scaffolding helps us sense tremors and fault lines, breakdowns and breakthroughs in the pulsations of life. These capacities are necessary to access sources within us, which may sometimes be hidden in the reservoirs of our common life, of our connected and contiguous landscapes. They help script the forging of bonds, and of affinities and sororities, so as to change the rules of the game.

In the Sourcebook (2019) to Afterglow, we had shared an amazement, which we would like you to feel again:

“Life, the universe, the world, and the time of each day disintegrates and gets re-constituted through innumerable acts, incrementally rebuilding through luminous care. Broken minutes are mended in the afterglow of time’s toxic debris. Life is a luminous autodidact.”

In this Afterglow, we welcome you.

Yokohama Triennale 2020 “Afterglow”
The exhibition as a “thicket”

KIMURA Eriko
Curatorial Head, Yokohama Triennale 2020

Yokohama Triennale 2020 “Afterglow” consists of an exhibition and a series of projects called “Episōdo,” which attempt to expand the notion of the art show, liberating it from its conventional geographical, temporal and expressional constraints.* Here I focus on the exhibition, introducing the artists and the characteristics of their works.

In approaching Yokohama Triennale 2020, which was developed in this current climate of unprecedented instability, the title that Raqs Media Collective so presciently proposed was the word “Afterglow.” I envision it referring to the fragments of light captured from the energy that flows through the “thicket” of thought and wisdom in a world where all things are complexly intertwined. The term was derived from the five text-based “sources” announced in November 2019 that encompass values unencumbered by existing hierarchies: human inquisitiveness and knowledge acquired by autodidacticism, friendship and care towards others, and co-existence with toxicity.

So, how exactly have the artists’ works come together to form this exhibition “thicket”?

One group of works is focused on phenomena that occurred in the past. Many of these originated in events that the artist, their family, or the people around them experienced, and from there they have been developed flexibly and freely to encompass not only world history and politics, but also the future of science, medicine and ecosystems. In another group of works, the human body is the motif—the weakness of the body or control of it by others. What meaning can a body, which has its own established symbolic meaning, possess within different contexts? Alternatively, the characteristics of the body itself and the diversity of its meanings are presented, such as when it is transformed through integration with a different symbolic meaning. And in other works again, the focus is on the mechanisms of human perception and cognition—reminding us just how much the world we understand is dependent on its relationship with our perception.

What the global spread of the new virus has made apparent—even more so than its toxicity—is a distrust of and overconfidence in information, and a fear of an uncertain future and other people. Once the immediate crisis has passed, memories of fear will likely remain like sediment here and there in people and society. In order to survive in such a world, it will become more important than ever for each of us to recognize the diversity of both human society and our entire ecosystem, and to stand on our own feet and exist as though glowing like a light. Yokohama Triennale 2020 aims to provide an opportunity, through contemporary art, to think about the power to “catch that light” which will allow us step into an uncertain future.

*Several of the artists participating in “Episōdo” have been announced in the artist list on p. 9.

The Mission of the Yokohama Triennale

MISSION
The Yokohama Triennale, one of the leading international exhibitions of contemporary art in Japan, will spearhead the development of 'Culture, Art and Creative City Yokohama' and cultivate a spiritually rich society that embraces diversity.

GOALS
- To open new channels through art
  - By celebrating contemporary art, the Yokohama Triennale provides opportunities to engage with a wide range of expressions, which transcends any given genre or era, to foster better understanding between people from many different generations and backgrounds.
- To engage with the world
  - As a national project, the Yokohama Triennale strives to contribute to international exchange and mutual understanding through its commitment to conveying new principles and values.
- To engage with the community
  - By collaborating with partners in 'Culture, Art and Creative City Yokohama', the Yokohama Triennale enhances and promotes the unique resources in the city.

GUIDING POLICIES
- Striving for excellence / Nurturing future generations / Contributing to shaping an inclusive society / Engaging with the Community / Celebrating art / Attracting business and tourism
